Miss Roosevelt Presented With a Medal Girdle.

SEASIDE PLEASURES WHERE WASHINGTONIANS MAY

BE HEARD FROM.

Capital Residents Widely Scattered in East and West-Personal Notes.

Miss Alice Roosevelt, after a series of northern visits, has returned to Oyster Bay, just in time to receive a new girdle sent her by the Amateur Athletic Union in compliment to her attendance at the annual meeting. June 4, when, in spite of the bad weather, she kept her appointment and presented to the happy victors at the various games the medals they had won. The buckle fastening her red, white and blue girdle is composed of a set of three gold medals, similar to those earned by the winners, and connected by gold fleur de lis. On the reverse is a suitabl inscription. It is not expected that Miss Roosevelt will stay home long, for she is promised for other visits that will cover the next two months and more.

The curtain-raisers at Newport this summer seem to be in charge of the same hands, as Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, Mrs. Her-man Oeirichs and Mrs. Reggie Vanderbilt have pre-empted the last days of this month. Mrs. Oeirichs has dinner invitations out for the 29th, the same night that the Vanderbilts have selected for their Sandy Point farm dinner and dance, but guests asked by the first hostess can get to the cotillion by midnight with the great-est ease. With the automobile set a distance of five miles or so is a mere triffe, and really has no bearing whatever on ac-

Mrs. Fish does not seem to be exiling herself from Newport, as it was feared she might after her philosophical essays last summer on society in general, and the New-port brand in particular, and her dinner party is to be followed by a vaudeville per-formance. This combination for a night's amusement is not new, either, but the various details may present the novelty indispensable if the affair is to be talked of afterward. A merry war is said to be afterward. A merry war is said to be starting at Newport, and the survivors will be present at the golf club ball shortly. The favored number in society is to be cut down to 200. A committee of forty whose names seem to include all the familiar ones is getting up the event. Each man has five tickets, and he is responsible for their proper placing. It will certainly sim-plify matters greatly if the 200 selections leave out no person that any of the committee considers necessary for his social happiness, but when that limited aggregation of exclusives get tired of each other and want the sensation that comes with new blood, well, what then? The bars usually drop sooner or later after the right-ful amount of push is exerted, and the Newport 200 is not likely to last as long as the McAllister 400. If it did entertaining in a large and conspicuous scale would soon cease altogether, and that is about as likely as that the always rich or the newly rich will dispense with any or all of their envied prerogatives.

lowed pay at the same rate as that given the highest ranking captain in the navy.

The scale is as follows: Captains, on sea duty, $4,500; on shore duty, $3,500, and on waiting orders, $2,800. According to this arrangement, Capt. Lemly, while judge advocate general of the navy, drew pay at increase in pay of 10 per cent when en-gaged in actual warfare.

Capt. Lemly therefore claimed that as the entitled to this additional 10 per cent, even though his duties confined him to a desk in the Navy Department in Washington during the time of hostilities.

It is held by the controller that during the late war with Spain captains were given the temporary rank and pay of admirals of the lowest grade, and that Capt. Lemly on this basis would have the same right to the pay given these officers as he would

There has been some talk for several days that the exposition officials would have to exposition company would have difficulty in making the payment is the fact that the money is now in the subtreasury. Not only have we made the payment, but it was done a day ahead of time, and we will that at the time of the last payment the receipts had been so small that the share of the government was not considered suffi-cient and that Secretary Shaw notified the fair officials that the next payment must be at least half a million dollars to even matters up. This is the payment that was
